

24v lithium battery

24v lithium battery

Curious if anyone has experience with this Tracker Marine Lithium Deep Cycle Battery. I'm looking to upgrade and these 60ah units look to be my size and power. I run a 80 lb Ultrex 24v on my 17.5 ft G3. I only have room for group 24 batteries. Any input or advice?

Considering that most all lithium batteries are made in China - probably only at 2-3 facilities. Save some money and get one from another label...preferably a company that's been around a while.

<https://&keywords=mighty+max+lithium+75ah&qid=1647473168&s=electronics&sprefix=mighty+max+lithium+75ah%2Celectronics%2C126&sr=1-2>

Whichever brand you pick you won't regret it. Since I switched out to ionic lithium it's incredible the time you get out of them. I run a 36V Ultrex and can run it 10 hours with a lot being on spot lock and at the end of the day I'll show 70% battery life.

Also there 125ah for cranking, 3 birds with mega 360, live wells and 2 Poles I haven't gone under 80%. I went with ionic because a MinnKota precision charger works with them so no need to buy another charger. Good luck on your search.

This is who makes Tracker lithium.

<https://relionbattery/>

Another "Made in China" LiFePo.

True, but the relion comes with a better warranty. If that even means anything.

I'm torn about ordering a battery online versus a brick and mortar purchase for warranty/issue purposes.

There are countless companies selling essentially the same LiFePO4 batteries. I expect most of them will be gone in a few years making their warranties worthless. I would expect BPS to honor the warranty even if the company that made the battery is out of business. That's the only advantage I would see to buying from BPS. I'm sure you could get the same quality battery for a lot less. The question is are you a gambler?

even if the company that made the battery is out of business.

Contact us for free full report

24v lithium battery

Web: <https://kary.com.pl/contact-us/>

Email: energystorage2000@gmail.com

WhatsApp: 8613816583346

