Solar panels require very little upkeep, but there is some occasional maintenance and inspection to help ensure optimal performance. You should wash your panels with water when there is built up dirt or dust. Inspect your panels on occasion to look for any visual defects, and check for rust on the mounting. The Federal Investment Tax Credit (ITC) encourages the use of renewable energy by providing a tax credit to owners of an energy property that meets established performance and quality standards. A tax credit is a dollar-for-dollar reduction in the amount of income tax you would otherwise owe.

While most customers who qualify for BluePower and BluePower Plus+ have a large enough tax appetite to take advantage of the full tax credit, consult your tax advisor for advice on your specific situation.

The difference in your production level in these two different locations is a result of how your system is hooked into your home for maximum efficiency. As your panels produce power during the day, they will channel the energy directly into your home and as that energy is being used. This means during the times when you are both producing and consuming power, the energy from your panels will run directly into your home to supplement your consumption. This results in the power traveled directly into your home not reporting to the power grid to be recorded by your utility company.
