Electricity market georgetown

Back in 2002, Texas legislators voted to deregulate the Lone Star State's energy market. Thanks to this decision, as a resident of Georgetown, Texas, you now have the power to choose which energy company you want to take care of your electricity needs. Because you have the freedom of choice, suppliers work hard to earn your business through affordable rates.

Before buying a new electricity plan, it's important for you to be aware of the difference between utility companies and electricity providers. Georgetown, TX, utilities are in charge of responding to power outages, maintaining power lines, and delivering electricity to your home. These companies are determined based on your location, so you can't choose which utility serves your home. The local utility in Georgetown is Oncor Electric Delivery.

Then there are the many Georgetown electricity providers that generate power and sell electricity plans to customers. You can choose from a number of electric companies, including popular providers like 4Change Energy, Discount Power, and TXU Energy.

In the event of a power outage, you should contact your Georgetown utility company, not your electric provider. You can contact Oncor by reporting the outage through their website. You can also call them at 1-888-313-4747 or text OUT to 66267.

As you shop for the best electricity rates in Georgetown on the Choose Energy marketplace, you'll come across a few different types of plans:

The Lone Star State leads the U.S. in green energy generation. In fact, Texas creates the most wind energy and the second-most solar energy of all 50 states. If you're interested in solar panels in Texas, check out our solar energy hub.
