African penguin population numbers have dropped 60% in the last 30 years. Georgia Aquarium aids in their fight for survival through breeding programs and partnerships with organizations in their native South Africa, like the South African Foundation for the Conservation of Coastal Birds.

Find out what we're doing, how we're succeeding, and how you can support our mission.

Georgia Aquarium membership supports not only African penguin survival but all of the Aquarium's efforts in aquatic animal research and conservation. Membership and other contributions are critical to continuing our efforts and success in our mission.

For the first time ever, Georgia Aquarium is proud to announce a brand-new coastal birds exhibit, featuring roseate spoonbill and scarlet ibis. The Margaritaville Vacation Club Dolphin Coast gallery is now home to these colorful birds and this new habitat is the first of its kind at the Aquarium--featuring both aquatic and arboreal elements. Visit us to learn about the importance, diversity, and delicate balance of coastal ecosystems.
