Yes, our single fuel plan or tariff means you get your electricity with us, and your gas with another supplier (if your home has gas). You can find out more about our electricity-only tariffs here.

Why don't they just list the standing charge and unit rate instead of all this average household nonsense. No other prices are marked up like this. It's like just like pulling into a petrol station and the price listing saying the average person will spend X on petrol a year if they filled up here instead of price per litre!!

They do, at <https://plans.ovoenergy> .

If you chuck in random postcodes, you can get the entire country.

Ahh... Yeah, that's unfortunately too complicated to do I'm afraid. The page would just be a giant messy table if they did that.

They should just list the standing charge and price per unit. People aren't as stupid as they think. We know that if a loaf of bread cost 50p then if we buy 4 loaves it will cost us ?2 if you instead tell us the average person spends ?60 a year on bread that doesn't tell us how much bread costs!
