To qualify for the California Alternate Rates for Energy (CARE) Program, you must meet the current income guidelines or have someone residing in your household who participates in a qualifying public assistance program.

While we don't require you to submit proof of eligibility when you initially apply, at any time during your enrollment you may be selected to participate in the CARE Verification process.

High Usage Verificationcustomers will have received an email or letter describing their household as "using a very high level of energy" in the first paragraph.
