Have you noticed that electric cars and, in particular, Teslas are more and more numerous on our streets? Is there any chance that you can exploit this fact for business purposes?

Many users noticed Tesla Charging Station being installed outside restaurants, supermarkets, malls, and more.

How does it work? Is Tesla profitable? Do you really want to become the owner of a Tesla charging station and sell "electric charges" to drivers?

But is it a franchise program that allows you to become the owner of those stations? Let's find out together.

The Tesla Charging Station Franchise is a program launched by Tesla that allows business owners to install Tesla charging stations outside their businesses.

The program is beneficial for both Tesla and the businesses that participate in the program.

While Tesla can widen their network of chargers, businesses can exploit the fact that chargers attract more clients, make them spend more time in the store (because they need to wait for the car to be charged and ready to go), and elevate the general quality level of the service offered.

As you certainly already know, Tesla is the world-leader electric car manufacturer.
