CEOs are responsible for managing a company. This can include delegating and directing agendas, driving profitability, managing company organizational structure and strategy, and communicating with the board.

It depends. CEOs are the owners of a company in some cases or are elected by the board of directors in others.

CEO is the highest position to occupy in a company. The CFO is responsible for the financial discipline of a company, identifying its strengths and weaknesses and ultimately reporting to the CEO.

A CEO often reports to a board of directors. The board oversees the performance of the CEO and can elect to remove or replace them if they feel that the executive's performance isn't producing the results they want to see.
